BACKGROUND DETAILS

Sourcing Details:

Want to support women in coffee? A group women producers in Tolima organized through the Asociación Ecoterra SAS, who are working together to find an international market for their coffee. Organizing as a group was a critical first step because these women are individually cultivating coffee on small farms of just a few acres. The women have leaders from each community to establish a larger network of support. The model of collaboration produces traceable community blends with vibrant regional profile.

Processing Details:

This particular lot was produced by 84 women producers who cultivate coffee in the municipality of Chaparral. During the harvest, each producer follows a strict protocol which includes picking cherries at optimum ripeness, hand sorting, floating to remove damaged and undeveloped beans, depulping and fermenting for periods of up to 24 hours. After fermentation, the parchment covered seed is washed and placed on patios or raised beds to slowly dry to 11%.
